I am trying to find the license serial number for matlab for use with the FLEXlm instruction to test for the proper installation of the TM package. I am looking for any help on this at all. MATLAB licenses can get corrupt and before I send that to the customer I want to know there is a way to find the license serial number for matlab. Thanks in advance A: Did you find it? You're right, Matlab License file can become corrupt when emailed. Two possible ways to correct the problem Using network download/upload as stated in the article "MATLAB license file for use with FLEXlm.zip." So, just download the file from the MATLAB site (.m license file), upload it to the server, download it from the web. The problem in case of wrong email sender address, as mentioned in your post PROBLEM: there is no way to find the serial number of a license which has been sent with a corrupted address. is quite a tricky. Using FLEXlm instructions: Basically, you can test whether any current license file is valid or not. To do so, you need to download a valid license file (.m file) from the MATLAB site, decompress it and upload it to the server. Then, if FLEXlm detects a downloaded license file (and if it didn't find any in the software directory), then it will assume that this license file is valid.
